A Pioneer In Cooperation

By Miss Jim P. Matthews, Acquisitions Librarian
Joint University Libraries, Nashville

"A pioneer with the unique and successful concept of the Joint University Libraries." Thus does the incoming director, David Kaser, pay tribute to the organizing genius and administrative skill of the first director, Augustus Frederick Kuhlman. How extensively he did pioneer, a look at the record will show.

It was no mere chance that three institutions found themselves on adjacent campuses when active planning for library cooperation began in 1935. One condition of the Peabody Education Fund grant for establishing George Peabody College was that it be moved "to a site adjacent to or on the campus of Vanderbilt University." With the opening of classes on the new campus in 1914, the first step in inter-institutional cooperation in instruction was taken. In 1924, Scarritt College was moved from Kansas City to its present campus. Again nearness was a factor in location so that Scarritt students might take courses offered by both institutions. In the late 1920's, the three institutions, in need of aid for library expansion, appealed individually to the foundations for grants. The General Education Board sent Dr. William Warner Bishop and Dean Louis Round Wilson to survey the feasibility of a joint university library. They recommended a general library but failed to find and recommend an acceptable plan of ownership and administration. On April 16, 1931, the General Education Board indicated its sympathetic consideration when and if the institutions could offer an acceptable plan. A joint faculty committee failed in formulating a plan. Then in November, 1935, Vanderbilt University invited Dr. Kuhlman to come to Nashville to work out a program for improving the library resources and services of the University. He suggested a joint self-survey of educational and research facilities as well as library needs and as a part of this survey, he worked out a plan for the Joint University Libraries which was accepted in 1936.

Again it was no mere chance that the man selected as library consultant on the self-survey was A. F. Kuhlman. His ability and experience were as pertinent to the problems of cooperation as were the adjacent campuses of the three institutions.

Iowa-born and Illinois-trained, he had met Tennessee and the Southeast first in 1918 as a soldier in the U.S. Army stationed at Camp Greenleaf near Chattanooga. Again in 1920, as director of surveys for the Southern Division, American Red Cross, A. F. Kuhlman took a closer look at Tennessee in a social survey of the city of Jackson and Madison County. Early in life he demonstrated his ability to do three jobs at once and to do them all well. During his professorship at the University of Missouri, he served on multiple welfare projects, at the same time working toward the completion of his graduate study. In the final years of that study in Chicago, his work with fifteen research libraries for the Social Science Research Council and his published Guide to Materials on Crime and Criminal Justice won recommendation from the Social Science Division of the University that he be appointed Associate Director of Libraries of the University of Chicago. The seven years in that capacity, 1929-1936, saw much activity in cooperative projects; work toward document centers, union lists of official publications and organization in library institutes.

In 1935, therefore, Dr. Kuhlman could bring to the problems of library cooperation in the Nashville area much first-hand knowledge of cooperation elsewhere but nothing similar to the plan to be evolved for the University Center. This was real pioneering; there was no precedent. Duke and North Carolina were cooperating in their exchange of catalogs and daily delivery of inter-library loans but that operated over a distance of fourteen miles. Georgia considered a cooperative program as early as 1929 but no action was taken on her university center until 1938 and again it involved no central building. The only similar project, the Associated Colleges of Claremont, with its college federation of 1925 was still years away from the concept of joint ownership. And so the survey committee of the three institutions, with Dr. Kuhlman commuting from Chicago as consultant, evolved a plan for coordination in instruction and research and defined the essentials of a unique library system.

On March 26, 1936, the administrative officers of the three institutions signed an agreement providing for the development of a joint library system with unification of library resources and services, the establishment of a Peabody-Vanderbilt library trust and the location of a library building on a central site deeded by Vanderbilt with joint ownership and administration. On September 1, 1936, the Joint University Libraries was established on an interim contract and Dr. A. F. Kuhlman was appointed director. The first cooperative projects, an LC depository and a union catalog of Nashville libraries, were in operation before the end of 1936. In the fall of 1937, the General Education Board offered to give one million dollars for the joint library project if a similar amount was raised by the three schools before the end of 1938. That offer was met by December with one-fourth of the amount from the Carnegie Corporation and the remainder from 5,440 individuals including faculties, students, citizens of Nashville and friends from other areas. With operations fully defined under the Trust Indenture of September 1, 1939, plans for the new building went forward and construction was completed in 1941. Cooperative service was evident even in the architecture, with one front facing Peabody and Scarritt and the other opening on Vanderbilt campus. In November, 1951, a survey was made of the effectiveness of the cooperative service and additional financial needs. The survey committee, Drs. J. D. Russell, E. W. McDiarmid and R. E. Paty, gave this evaluation: "The Joint University Libraries in Nashville has been a project that has attracted attention from its very beginning. It has been looked upon as an extremely hopeful experiment that might point the way to an economical pattern of providing many types of service through effective inter-institutional cooperation. The persons who set up the agreement originally were men of unusual vision. Their foresight has been adequately demonstrated through the decade in which the Joint University Libraries has been in operation."

Finally, it is no mere chance that an account of A. F. Kuhlman, since coming to Nashville in 1935, should be the story of the Joint University Libraries. Intrinsically the man and the libraries have been one. It is easy to recount the facts of this unique development; it is difficult to define the personal elements within these facts. However, his genius for organization, his unusual ability to evaluate situations and his unfailing patience lead one to conclude that the success of this unprecedented experiment, which might so easily have been wrecked by a false move, has been due largely to the abilities of one man, its first director.

In addition to fostering his primary charge, the Joint University Libraries—in itself, a three-man job—he has found time to give signal service to Tennessee and the Southeast, as well as to librarianship at large. That early ability to do three things at once seems to have multiplied with practice. In those crucial first years in Nashville, with building plans and staff organization for the new cooperative venture, he continued editorial work with the ALA Committee on Documents and Archives; he served as first editor of College and Research Libraries, 1939-41, another bit of pioneering. In 1940, he began the surveying of college libraries, a service he expects to continue. The search for effective methods of cooperation among neighboring libraries has been basic in much of his survey work: the North Texas Regional survey (1943) sought to establish cooperation in acquisitions and public services among four college and two public libraries; the Saint Paul college survey (1952) centered in practical methods of inter-service among four college libraries, a reference library and a public library; likewise the survey of seven private colleges in Arkansas (1958) sought ways and means of cooperation to increase resources and improve services. His most extensive service to the Southeast is in his work as consultant on library buildings. Of the eight buildings which bear his imprint, seven are in the Southeast and range in date from 1949 to 1960.

His time has been given freely in official duties to many groups. He served as president of the Nashville Library Club 1953-54, as president of the Tennessee Library Association, 1954-55, and as chairman of the Association of Southeastern Research Libraries, 1957-59. Other cooperative activities include service as treasurer of the Monteagle (Tennessee) Assembly, 1944-1952, chairmanship of the committee of librarians on the first Classified List of Reference Books and Periodicals for College Libraries, 1939-41, and of the committee of librarians in collaboration with college administrators in the Work Conference in Sewanee, 1942. He served as joint chairman of a Conference of Graduate Deans and Librarians, 1944, and edited the proceedings, The Development of Library Resources and Graduate Work in the Cooperative University Centers of the South. He was honored by his Vanderbilt colleagues in his election to the Alpha Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa in 1941, by his Southeastern colleagues in his election as their first chairman of the Association of Southeastern Research Libraries and by his library colleagues at large by the membership of Joint University Libraries in the Association of Research Libraries since 1946.

And what of A. F. Kuhlman the man? With multiple activities which would turn many men into automatons, he is still very much the humanitarian. His "May I help you?" is no casual greeting; he really means it. The term, "retired" loses its aptness when applied to A. F. Kuhlman. No man of his vigor could be really "retired." Rather should one say that he has reached the institutional deadline. At a staff dinner given in his honor on June 30, this agelessness was a matter of comment both by those present and by former staff members in letters of greeting. A retired staff member then came up with an explanation of the phenomenon: "he never holds a grudge." That, in essence, is the story of A. F. Kuhlman the man. He believes so completely in the principle of cooperation on the personal as well as the institutional level that he has no place for petty differences.

His colleagues in the three institutions recorded their appreciation in a formal resolution as follows:

"Whereas, Dr. A. F. Kuhlman has served for twenty-four years with unflagging devotion, diligence and the highest aspirations, as Director of the Joint University Libraries; and

Whereas, During his administration the Joint University Libraries attained and held a position of outstanding leadership among the finest libraries in the South; and

Whereas, In all his relationships with the faculties of the three cooperating institutions, Dr. Kuhlman even in the most straitened financial circumstances never failed to exhibit a completely cooperative spirit in helping them to meet their research and teaching requirements

Now therefore be it resolved, by the faculties of Peabody College, Scarritt College and the College of Liberal Arts and Science and Graduate Faculty of Vanderbilt University, severally and jointly:

To A. F. Kuhlman we extend our warm gratitude and hearty admiration for his contribution to the ideal of a University Center, and to him upon the occasion of his retirement—June 30, 1960—go our most cordial good wishes for as many more years of useful and productive services to his profession and community."

Fortunately for Tennessee and the Southeast, Dr. Kuhlman is remaining in Nashville and will continue to contribute to library development in this region. His next twenty-five years may be just as productive as have been the first twenty-five in Tennessee.

THAT DEVIL FORREST

by JOHN A. WYETH

Harper—$6.95

Originally published in 1899 under the title "Life of General Nathan Bedford Forrest" and out of print since 1924, this new edition has been only slightly edited but completely reset. A good addition to the material on the West Tennessee cavalry leader, to place beside biographies by Tennesseans like "Bedford Forrest and His Critter Company" by Andrew Lytle (recently re-issued by McDowell, Obolensky), "First With the Most Forrest" by Robert S. Henry, and "As They Saw Forrest" edited by Robert S. Henry (McCowat-Mercer Press, Jackson, Tennessee).

by ROBERT PENN WARREN

Random House—$4.95

A contemporary novel set in Tennessee, about a young man trapped in a deep cave. The crisis that develops out of efforts to rescue him involves all the townspeople, bringing out hidden depths in their own lives and characters and in their relationships with each other. The author was educated at Vanderbilt University, where he was one of the group contributing to The Fugitive, a magazine devoted to poetry. He has received the Pulitzer Prize for both Poetry and the Novel.

CHRISTMAS AT MONTICELLO

by HELEN TOPPING MILLER

Longmans, Green—$2.75

The sixth in a series of Christmas novelettes by the Morristown author, this one dealing with Thomas Jefferson and his family. To place beside "Christmas at Mount Vernon," "Christmas With Robert E. Lee," "Christmas For Tad," "Her Christmas at the Hermitage," and "No Tears for Christmas."

HAPPY FAMILIES ARE ALL ALIKE

by PETER TAYLOR

McDowell, Obolensky—$3.95

A collection of recent short stories—including the O. Henry first prize story—by the Trenton author of "The Long Fourth and Other Stories," the novelettes laid in Tennessee titled "A Woman of Means" and "The Widows of Thornton," and the play "Tennessee Day in St. Louis." Mr. Taylor writes convincingly of the complexities of life that beset and upset families. With equal facility he writes winningly of the very young and the small problems that loom so large in their sometimes frightening world.

THE FAR FRONTIER

by WILLIAM O. STEELE

Harcourt, Brace—$2.95

The story of a rough and ready boy who lived in Tennessee when it was the Western border, and his work with a naturalist from Philadelphia whose book learning he learns to appreciate. There are good pictures of Chickamauga Indian warfare. This is perhaps the best book to date by the Chattanooga author of "Winter Danger," "John Sevier," "Wilderness Journey" and other books for young people.

FOREST OF THE NIGHT

by MADISON JONES
Harcourt, Brace—$4.50

A novel about an upright young schoolmaster settling in Tennessee in the early nineteenth century, with good pictures of frontier living and Indian fighting. The author is a native of Nashville and a graduate of Vanderbilt who taught English at the University of Tennessee. He has written another novel with a Tennessee setting titled "The Innocent."

THE VIOLENT BEAR IT AWAY

by FLANNERY O'CONNOR
Farrar, Straus and Cudahy—$3.75

A novel about a Tennessee backwoods family driven by a strange, fearful vision of duty to the Lord. By the Georgia author of the novel about Southern evangelism titled "Wise Blood" and the volume of short stories titled "A Good Man Is Hard To Find."

ONE FOR THE LITTLE BOY

by LYDIA A. DUGGINS
Exposition Press—$3.00

The story of three children's "growing-up" years in a Tennessee mountain town. The author was born in Clinton and graduated from the University of Tennessee.

NEWSNOTES

Public Libraries News

Caney Fork Regional Library, Sparta, Tennessee, was cited recently in a national publicity contest. The citation read "for breadth of coverage and recognition of purpose as a motivating force in publicity use." The Award was presented to Mrs. Mary Little, Regional Librarian, June 21, during the ALA-CLA Conference in Montreal, Canada.

The contest, honoring a great pioneer and promoter of librarianship, was among several divisions in population. The Caney Fork Region was among libraries between 25,000 and 100,000 population. The Caney Fork Region covers seven counties: Bledsoe, Grundy, Marion, Sequatchie, Van Buren, Warren, and White. The seven counties have a total population of 89,330.

Howard Haycraft, (right) President of the H. W. Wilson Company, presents a John Cotton Dana Publicity Award to Mrs. Mary Little, Regional Librarian, at the Wilson Company Tea in Montreal, P. Q., Canada, June 21, 1960. The Tea and presentation were held in connection with the annual conference of The American Library Association.

Miss Elizabeth Cole, Regional Librarian, Blue Grass Region, Columbia, has resigned effective August 1, 1960, to accept a position as Consultant in the Library Extension Division of the Florida State Library. Miss Cole has been with the Tennessee Regional Library System since 1952 when she became a bookmobile librarian in the Upper Cumberland Region, Cookeville. She transferred to the Blue Grass Region at the time it was organized in 1954.

The third state-wide meeting of all of the employees of the Tennessee Regional Library System was held in Union City May 10-12. The theme of this year's meeting was "Books and Reading." Many of the staff members visited municipal libraries, county libraries and regional library centers enroute to Union City. Three regions had acquired new station wagons which enabled their members to travel comfortably and economically.

Six staff members from the Tennessee Regional Library System attended the American Library Association conference in Montreal, Canada, June 20-24. They are Miss Elizabeth Cole, Miss Katheryn Culbertson, Miss Irma Harlan, Mrs. Mary Little, Miss Helen Lockhart and Miss Marguerite Voorhies. Mrs. Little attended the Preconference Institute of the American Association of Library Trustees June 18-19.

Since the Clinch-Powell Regional Library Service has a contract with Alanar Book Processing Corporation for processing library books during 1960-61, it seemed advisable to plan carefully for the time which will be saved. The regional staff held several planning meetings to discuss general plans. Part of the planning was a special meeting involving community librarians who have been in the region since 1952 when Mrs. Kittrell, Regional Librarian, came into the service. These librarians met as a group by themselves and then the regional staff joined them to devise a checksheet for measuring library improvement during the coming year. All librarians in the regional system were invited to send in ideas.

Another part of planning for next year involved a library publicity "laboratory" workshop attended by librarians and bookmobile station custodians. This group made posters to be used in stations during 1960-61. It is planned to have enough so that when regional staff makes visits between visits of the bookmobile, the posters can be rotated among the stations.

For the printed ANNUAL REPORT this year the region reported growth of the service during the "fifties" so the report really covers the highlights in a 10-year period.

The Morristown Public Library has been moved from its former location in two small rooms of the Woman's Club House to much larger quarters in the Henry Street level of the Bell Telephone Office Building. Approximately three weeks were spent by the Nolichucky Regional Library staff in weeding, packing and shelving the books. With walls and shelving painted a light color; and, with the addition of bright furniture and draperies, the library is most attractive. The new quarters afford easier access to the books. There is, in addition to the main reading room, a fiction room, a children's corner, and a young people's corner. New equipment was made possible by donations made by various civic clubs. On Tuesday, June 14, the new location was formally opened. Open house was arranged by the Jaycettes. Guests were greeted by members of Hamblen County Library Board; members of the Jaycette committee; the county librarian, Mrs. Carrie Brown Stuart and the regional librarian, Miss Dorothy Sharpless. This move is only temporary and was necessitated by the demands of an evergrowing city. Plans are to begin immediately for a permanent library building befitting the progress evident in other activities of this city.

Mrs. Janet Smith Hayes returned to the Highland Rim Regional Library Staff July 1 after receiving her M.A. in L.S. from George Peabody College in June. Prior to entering Peabody, Mrs. Hayes was employed for four years as a Bookmobile Librarian in this region. Before and after the May state staff meeting held in Union City, the staff of the Highland Rim Regional Library Center visited three other Regional Centers, Warioto, Reelfoot, and Shiloh; six local libraries, Montgomery County, Ridgely, Tiptonville, Union City, Jackson, and Brownsville. In addition we visited four libraries of the Memphis Public Library System, Cossitt Reference, Main Library, Vance Branch, and Whitehaven. A Reading Institute was conducted for the Home Demonstration Clubs of Rutherford County. Seventeen of the twenty-two clubs were represented.

On February 1, the Jackson and Madison County Free Libraries were officially merged and the five-month temporary period for this merger has been completed. The new library is now called Jackson-Madison County Free Library, with Miss Frances Smith as Librarian, and Mrs. Lawrence Gaia as County Librarian. The former three member Board that directed the City Library, has been increased to seven, with three of the members being approved by the County Judge. The merger is run on a yearly contract system from July 1, and the agreement may be cancelled by either party with sixty days' notice.

While Miss Agnes Dolvin takes a leave of absence to travel in Europe this summer, Mrs. Alice Crippen is serving as Reference Librarian at Kingsport Public Library. Mrs. Crippen was formerly at Indiana University Library.

The Friends of the Kingsport Public Library had a dinner meeting on April 29, with W. F. Freehoff presiding. The program was planned to coordinate with the observance of National Library Week. A highlight of the occasion was a talk on the writing of local history by Robert S. Loving, author of "Double Destiny, the story of Bristol, Tennessee-Virginia." Mrs. Gerald Armstrong, Secretary, made an impressive report of the accomplishments of the group since its organization in November, 1959. The major objective for 1960 is publicity, including a monthly newsletter to the membership and increased newspaper coverage of the services and activities of the library.

Mr. Robert C. Burton, Works Manager, Tennessee Eastman Company, and Mrs. M. J. Adams are newly appointed members of the Kingsport Public Library Commission. Mrs. Adams has been elected Secretary of the Commission, succeeding Mrs. Harvey C. Brooks. Mayor L. P. Gregory presented a certificate of appreciation to Mrs. Brooks in recognition of many years of faithful public service. "The Dinosaur Club" was the name of the summer reading project conducted at Kingsport Public Library by Mrs. Virginia Harman, Children's Librarian. Almost six hundred boys and girls participated and more children than ever before attended the Wednesday morning story hour.

Construction of the Kingsport Public Library building began July 5. The building is to be a memorial to Mr. J. Fred Johnson, one of the founders of modern Kingsport. Allen Dryden, of Kingsport, is the architect. Library Building Consultants prepared the statement of program. The size of the building is 22,925 square feet. Provision has been made for separate children's room, special area for service to young adults, greatly expanded group services, with auditorium, meeting rooms and audio-visual facilities, space for enlarged reference service and a sizeable Tennessee history collection. It is anticipated that the new building will be ready for occupancy early in 1961.

Knoxville has opened the Lonsdale Branch Library to full-time service effective July 1. This branch, which has been in operation since 1930, has been repainted and air-conditioned. Preliminary plans have been accepted for the proposed Sequoyah Hills Branch Library, which will replace a station that has been housed in a church for 10 years. This library building of modern design will be 3500 square feet and house about 12,000 books. Miss Helen Harris, retired Director of the Knoxville Public Library System was honored with the Outstanding Citizen's Award, given by the Council on Community Services at its annual meeting in June. Miss Harris is Secretary of United Fund and was Co-Chairman of the Governors' Conference on Problems of the Aging. The Knoxville Public Library has received a private donation of $10,000.00 for the relocation of its McClung Historical Collection. This collection will be moved on September 1 to the present Lawson McGhee auditorium and new furnishings and shelving will be provided. Mrs. Marion Chapman, Secretary-Treasurer, and Mr. J. T. Mengel, Vice-President of the Knoxville Public Library Board, have been reappointed for a three year term. Mr. Edward Albers, a former member, was appointed to the Board for a three year term to replace Mr. George Fritts who resigned. Mrs. June K. Horne, graduate of Peabody Library School, and former staff member of the Reelfoot Regional Library, will join the Adult Services Staff on August 1st to replace Miss Billie McKinney, who resigns as of that date. The library adopted a position-classification scale on April 1, and discontinued fee charges for phonograph records. In the three following months, circulation of records has increased 285%.

Memphis Public Library took bids in July for the construction of two new branches and the renovation of two older buildings. One branch to be erected in the Frayser area of Memphis will cost approximately $150,000 including site and furnishings; and the other, a Negro branch for North Memphis, will cost probably $130,000. Renovation of the old portion of the Cossitt Library building should be completed by September at a cost of $60,000. Mr. W. Turner Clark was appointed Assistant Director of MPL on March 1, leaving a vacancy in the post of Director of the Shelby County Library. Miss Estrid Kelstrup, branch librarian from Odense, Denmark, joined the MPL staff in June to study American library operations for five months.

David Marshall Stewart assumed his duties as chief librarian of the Nashville Public Library on June 1, 1960. Allen Kelton, who received his M.A. in Library Science from Peabody last year has joined the Nashville Public Library Reference Department. Carlton Rochell, an assistant in the Nashville Public Library Reference Department is planning to enter Peabody Library School in September. Mrs. R. O. Beauchamp of the Business Department of the Nashville Public Library attended the recent ALA Conference in Montreal. The Music and Film Division of the Nashville Public Library is publishing a new issue of its catalog of educational films. This is the first catalog released in over five years. It will contain all the films in the present collection and some others which will be added later this year. Plans are for a completion date before the end of July. Also during the past month 250 new recordings have been added to the library of serious music bringing the collection reasonably up-to-date.

— PATRONIZE OUR ADVERTISERS —

Mrs. Patricia L. Postell, who served as acting Librarian of the Oak Ridge Public Library for five months after the departure of former Librarian Reid A. Hoey for California, has now been named permanently to the post. On June 1 the Library was formally turned over to the year-old city of Oak Ridge. The months prior to this date were filled with hectic last minute plans and accounting, with inventories, retirement of files, budget hearings, and so on. Now all is relatively calm, the new air conditioning working smoothly, and the Library completely redecorated. All this has made the public use the Library more than ever, and summer figures have soared. The friends of the Oak Ridge Public Library are repeating one of last year's most popular summer features—a story hour for children each week. Every Wednesday morning young children gather in the Boys' and Girls' Room for an hour of carefully chosen stories read by an expert. The Friends are also planning a lecture series in the fall, with a former U-T professor talking on literature. The group is also investigating several projects and gifts for the Library. One of the continuing projects of the Library is the accumulation of material for an Oak Ridge section of the vertical files. Newspaper articles have appeared asking for public help and the response has been gratifying. Now every article appearing in the Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature about Oak Ridge has been obtained in some form or other, with the exception of six that are now being tracked down. The file also contains other relics of the war and atomic work done here.

College and University Libraries News

At East Tennessee State College this year there is a new Acquisitions Department, headed by Mrs. Mary Lyons Loyd.

Hiwassee College Library, of which Miss Ora Bizzell is librarian, reports that its book collection has doubled in the last five years, and its circulation has increased at the same rate.

Miss M. Irene Jones, librarian of Mooney Memorial Library, University of Tennessee Medical Units in Memphis, attended the meeting of the Medical Library Association at Kansas City, May 14-20. She was elected to a three year term on the Board of Directors of the Medical Library Association—1960-63.

Continually oppressed by the task of making an individual record of each book kept overdue by each student, and writing notices regarding these overdue books, the library of Memphis State University is making a trial run this summer experimenting with a different method of record keeping which it is hoped will eliminate much of the tedium of this chore. If this trial run proves satisfactory we will discuss it more fully at a later date.

The College and University section of the Tennessee Library Association was well represented at the joint conference of ALA-CLA in Montreal in June: Miss Virginia Turrentine from Lamar Memorial Library at Maryville College was there; Miss Alberta Cameron, from Tennessee Polytechnic Institute at Cookeville was there; Dr. A. F. Kuhlman, librarian emeritus of Joint University Libraries in Nashville was there; Dr. Arna Bontemps of Fiske University in Nashville was there; Mrs. Franklin Yost from Memphis State University in Memphis was there and Burrow Library located in Memphis at Southwestern College was represented by Mr. Albert Johnson. Following the convention Mr. Johnson continued his trip into Canada, touring the Gaspe Penninsula.

Two bus loads of librarians from the South made the trip to Montreal. Mississippi, for the first time, chartered a bus for the trip and Arkansas for the fifth time took its own chartered bus trip to convention. It has been suggested that Tennessee librarians would become much better acquainted with each other and cognizant of the library resources of the state if they could follow a similar course of action.
